That web page is awesome.

It's got a through line. And narrative tension.

...do you guys employ writers?

Gawd, I wish. These things would make more sense. Or at least we could fire the writers if they didn't.

Drat. Because, you know. Government bennies. *g*

Either D.B.'s croaked or he's one of ours.

If he was ours, the plane would not have made it down in one piece. He let 36 people walk away unharmed.

So all that's left is to tramp through a big piece of OR until somebody trips over a femur.

Dude, go get a triple-shot and a croissant and call it a day! Bureau rep be scrod!

I know, it's totally cool. But remains 30+ yrs old, chewed, scattered, and grown over with Oregon. And two hundred thou ain't even the payday it used to be.

No, I do not have a romantic molecule in my entire body. Or surrounding air volume.

You know how it is. You're about to go home to the wife and you look at the pile of paper on your desk and you think, "Elliot Ness woulda got 'im."

But he's made of fiction. And anyway, if you're going to measure yourself against imaginary people, Jason Gideon was last seen headed for a nervous breakdown, and the hills.

Oooh, maybe he's found D.B.!

Hey, I have a rule. If nobody dies if this doesn't get done (whatever "this" is) it goes on the bottom of the pile.

He's gotta be a major thefts guy, anyway. Here's hoping most of his job leans towards "nobody dies."

Y'know, I would not have thrived in old job long-term. Really, guarding the money--eh, go print some more. (o.O) New job has changed my perspective. *g*

Played inferior-technology single-player adventure games like the rest of us, dude.

Yeah, and what was Nessie's personal life like, anyway?

Nah, I get. You think, "Fakkinhell, I'm smarter than this mook. And he's gonna know it even in the afterlife."

But at some point you gotta drop the Mountie motto. Some point.

Yeah.

Still, it would be awesome to crack that case.
